

Adult Measure of Behavioural Inhibition (AMBI) & Retrospective Measure of Behavioural Inhibition (RMBI)

The Adult Measure of Behavioural Inhibition (AMBI) is a 16-item clinical research instrument developed in order to measure subjective reports of contemporaneous 'trait' inhibition. This instrument is given to respondents 16 years and over as a dimensional quantitative measurement of the temperamental tendency to respond to social novelty and risk stimuli, with inhibition and avoidance.

The Retrospective Measure of Behavioural Inhibition (RMBI) is an 18-item instrument for the retrospective reporting (by adults) of remembered inhibited behaviours in childhood (e.g., during the primary school years ages 5 – 13). This instrument was designed to capture the principal behavioural indices of "behavioural inhibition to the unfamiliar" as measured and observed in children when assessed in play-laboratory settings. This instrument is also a dimensional/quantitative measure.

Higher scores on both measures indicate a greater degree of inhibition. Please refer to the primary reference* for further details, and for initial psychometric evaluation.

Scoring Scale:

All questions were rated on a 3-point scale (i.e., 0 = "no/hardly ever"; 1 = "some of the time", or 2 = "yes/most of the time").

Scoring instructions:

The instrument is a dimensional measure of trait behavioural inhibition. Total scores are generated by summing all items after the negative (for BI) items have been reversed. Subscale scores may also be generated.

Please refer to the primary reference* for further details.
